I think many of my neighbors and friends have said it better than me. But I'm glad to share my dissent:

I believe that affordable housing should be affordable for the most struggling members of our community. Their right to shelter should not meet a quota or simply serve to justify an extractive gentrification project.

I believe that anything built presently for future generations should take water and land stewardship seriously. The land development in question has not prioritized sustainability, water protection, or environmental responsibility. It has not done nearly enough testing and lacks forthrightness and accountability.

No matter how well these people sell their ideas, they continue to act as salesmen and not community members—-invested in money rather than the land and the people who love it.

Sincerely,
